

1                   Dresden. March 28, 1872.

2

3   My dear Harry

4                   I thank you for your tender & loving words. I have no need to speak to 5   you of my loss, & of the change in the aspect of life to me, for you have been with us
6   enough ~~and~~ to know how happy we were, and you have known & loved us all enough
7   to feel with more truth than most others can what Susan's death is to us.—I am not 8   broken by it because her love is still strong enough to support me. I can bear what I have 9   to bear, for the thought of her is a comfort, and there is nothing but joy in the memory of 10   her during these ten years in which her presence has blessed me.

11   —

12                   You do not know how warm & true a friend you have lost in her.
13   She cared much for you. She has often said to me that she wished our boys might take 14   pattern from you. It would have pleased her to believe that you would care for her 15   children for their own sakes as well as for hers.

16                   My dear Harry I am glad you have seen her comparatively so lately, but I wish 17   you could have seen her during the last year. The happiest months of her life, I think,
18   were the months we passed in Venice. Life grew fuller & fuller of resource to her. All 19   powers of enjoyment, & of happiness increased from day to day. And it is a delight to 20   me to feel that she had never been more to others or to herself than during this last year.

21

—

22

I am ~~great~~ truly sorry that I have not written to you for so long, for my letter might have given you some faint reflection of the happiness of the past. I have had

23

24

you often & often in my affectionate thought, and I had meant, as [^]when[^] the spring brought fresh vigour & energy to me to write you a long, long letter. But that letter will never now be written. Your letters,—there are two unanswered on my table—have given me real pleasure. Write to me again. I will write to you as soon as I can get back into natural relations with the days.

25

26

27

28

29

I hope we may see you before many months have passed.

30

Your truly affectionate friend

31

C. E. Norton.

Notes

4 your tender & loving words • Henry James's 7 March [1872] letter of condolence to Charles Eliot Norton

7 Susan's death • Susan Sedgwick Norton died on 17 February 1872, following the birth of her son Richard

13 our boys • Eliot (1863-1932), Rupert (1867-1914), and Richard (1872-1918) Norton

14-15 her children • In addition to their three sons, Charles and Susan Norton had three daughters: Sara ("Sally"; 1864-1922), Elizabeth ("Lilly"; b. 1866), and Margaret (1870-1947)

26 Your letters,—there are two unanswered on my table • Henry James's letters to Norton of 4, 5 February 1872 and 7 March [1872]

© This is copyrighted material; reproduction for commercial purposes is not permitted by law except with permission of the copyright owners

To cite this letter, according to MLA style guidelines:

Norton, Charles Eliot. Letter to Henry James. 28 March 1872. James Family Papers. Houghton Library.

Harvard University. Cambridge, Mass. Dear Henry James.org Ed. Pierre A. Walker et al. 2005.

Salem State College. [insert your date of access here] <http://www.dearhenryjames.org>.